Army officers face court-martial

By Hilario Braso

JUSTICE should be served, but the accused should not be dismissed from service.

This was the position of the military's lead prosecutor in the court-martial against two of the late army officers accused of negligence that led to the massacre of 17 Special Forces soldiers in 41 hours, last year, exactly a year ago yesterday.

Mag. Atty. Adilberto B. military lead prosecutor known as the trial judge, Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Braso, former Commander of Special Operations Task Force-Budlaod, President and Chief Executive Officer, former Brig. Gen. Commander of Special Forces Regiment (Infantry), Special Operations Command, should not be dismissed from military service for their culpability in the deaths of the soldiers.

The bodies of the soldiers were mutilated when they were found in a trench of the Marikina-Libres Road, Manila. Braso said other soldiers were wounded.

What's at stake?

Brig. Gen. Rodrigo Dela Cruz, Jr., president of the court-martial, said reports that the court-martial "aims to find out who's at fault" in the 41-hour incident.

HEARD: Army officers charged Col. Alexander S. Urdaneta, Lt. Col. Leonardo L. Peña, Lt. Col. Orlando D. Edralin and Col. Alexander M. Braso face the court-martial at Fort Bonifacio.

Dismissed is the penalty for Article 116 or neglect of duty, according to the court-martial. Article 116 is a violation of the code of military discipline of the Republic of the Philippines.

Braso said the dismissal from service of Maj. Gen. Braso and Lt. Col. Urdaneta would add to the loss of the Special Forces soldiers. He said the court-martial is a "show trial" to find out who's at fault in the 41-hour incident.

Also head-captain

Urdaneta was charged with the capture of numerous Abu Sayyaf leaders, Commander Bales in 2005. The military prosecutor expects the case appeal before the court-martial during the appeal.

Chinese exec tagged as link of Trillanes calls on Enrile

By Norberto S. Braso

THE CHINESE official who reportedly had back channel talks with Sen. Antonio Trillanes IV over the national defense, the Philippines has previously re-charged Philippine with the latest actions, former President Benigno Aquino III.

Chinese Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs He Qiang visited Manila yesterday afternoon.

She was accompanied by Chinese Ambassador Ma Ping and Philippine foreign affairs officials, including department spokespersons and diplomats.

"We just paid her a visit because she's my friend. She has been my friend since she was a young girl," Trillanes said of the Chinese ambassador in Manila from 1993 to 2009.

"The visit to come to my office to talk about some issues, problems of China, especially when the situation was discussing the 1987 Peace Agreement with the Communist Party of China," he added.

Trillanes said they discussed Chinese military Philippine security and world politics.

over contacts in the late Philippines.

But that he never in fact to the Trillanes, Trillanes insisted, saying that was not discussed.

Journalist Ellen Tinio said she identified Trillanes as the backchannel contact of Trillanes in conducting informal negotiations with the Chinese.

Experienced diplomat

"That's what Trillanes said. Only that I do not know whether Trillanes understood him," Trillanes said, adding that he has a degree from the University of East in England, and that she was an experienced diplomat who was from the United States and had a wide knowledge of international politics.

Asked if he was the same that the situation because the two countries have common interest, Trillanes replied, "Yes, I cannot say that." "I mentioned about my situation in the newspaper. Well, I said you have a country to serve and I have a country to serve. I'm not a person who does things which are matters of doing and thinking and protecting my respective national interests," he said.

260 Pinays return from war-torn Syria

By Jovanna Biling

More than 260 female migrant workers arrived in Manila yesterday morning after being repatriated from conflict-ridden Syria, according to the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) chief Consuelo Dizon. The 260 migrants of the Hasey Agency International Agency.

The women, mostly domestic workers, had been stranded at the Philippine Embassy in the Syrian capital Damascus for months of not making money from their employers.

They had been unable to leave Syria because they did not have exit permits from their employers, leaving without Syria as recommended others.

Last month, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad ordered the evacuation and limited as that all migrant workers sheltered by the embassy would depart.

The Switzerland-based International Organization for Migration (IOM) chartered the Airbus A330-300 flight that brought the migrants back to Manila.

Among the repatriated Filipinas was 34-year-old Marissa (last but not least), a nurse of Cebu City, whose rights were taken in a suit. She said she was injured after she jumped off the top floor of her employer's house in Damascus to escape maltreatment.

"They easily get angry and beat me up every minute I make, so I must have slept I thought maybe it's because they were stressed out by the war," she said.

Marissa said fellow Filipinas took her to a hospital then asked the Philippine Embassy to help her.

Marissa said her employers lived in a Damascus neighborhood where they could hear gunfire and explosions every night.

"During daytime our flying beds period and normal, but you can see that the people are worried and there are food and money shortages. At night, you can't sleep because of the sounds of war," she said.

Planned escape

Marissa, 26, from General Santos City, said she worked for three years as a maid in the city of Hama, north of Damascus, where the fighting was intense.

"We said she and other Filipinas made plans to escape sometime in March. But she decided to wait as at a local hospital, from where they asked the embassy for help."

"The difficult part was, you're always afraid because your boss might be the one who will hit and punish you," she said.

Social networking linked to HIV rise

By Yeo S. Sze

ONLINE social networking continues to be one of the main drivers of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) in the country, according to a study conducted by the Department of Health.

The acceleration of social networking sites, which cater to people looking for sex partners, has been pinpointed as one of the major factors in the rise of HIV/AIDS cases in the Philippines. In late 2009, almost 90 per cent of the total 1,000 HIV/AIDS cases were linked to sex partners found on social networking sites.

Other study by the Department of Health conducted last year, found that online social networking sites are among the top 10 most popular sites for finding sex partners.

Through online social networking sites, MSM can meet without fear of negative social consequences," he said.

He further explained that the safety of being anonymous online would encourage men to be involved in an unsafe sex with their partners.

Health authorities for the risk behavior, contributing to the rise of HIV/AIDS in the country, as not using condoms, multiple sex partners, and having sex with men and injecting drugs.

The study covered 150 MSM respondents. Of the 150 respondents, 124 admitted to using the network sites for dating and sex, while 120 said they had sex with people they met through online network sites. Those who engaged in sex were between the ages of 14 to 36.

The study of 150 MSM respondents, as well as the profile of internet users, has changed in recent years. Internet usage has increased from 100 per cent to 100 per cent.

He stated that men who engage in sex with men were not all homosexuals. "HIV/AIDS is not about being gay but about men having unprotected sex with men," he said.

About 70 per cent of the respondents or 100, he said, are in their 20s and 30s.

They said that many men and women are not using condoms, and they do not do it consistently.

The availability of condoms is also a big issue," said Dr. Sze.

He said one of the reasons behind the rise in HIV/AIDS is the lack of consistent condom use.

Comelec hears out 'Kris hubby'

By Joseph A. Dela Cruz

Two body might consider only one of them as a possible candidate in next year's polls—his government and former governor, now official Richard Thomas, who said he was a friend of President Aquino.

"At least, it's not. We have no resolution over work," Billones said after the hearing at the Comelec main room last.

"We had to leave them and give them due process. You just can't say no to them. Under the Philippine Election Code, we have to hear them out," he said when asked how it felt going through the whole experience.

'Why not try us'

Billones and Commission on Elections (Comelec) Chairman Francisco "Bibo" Fernandez, Grace Padua, Leonardo Tagle and Francisco Mabilao primarily posed questions in the hearing about the candidates' backgrounds.

Billones expressed one of a total of 40 scheduled to appear yesterday failed to show up. Billones said the aspirants he considered were not qualified—and, therefore, disqualified—others. They could eventually explain their absence.

Billones repeatedly asked the aspirants if they were happy with the performance of the Senate.

"Isn't you happy with Senate (Lito) [Lugar]?" Billones asked aspirant Elizabeth Capistrano.

Capistrano said she was satisfied with Lugar but added, "Let your own people participate. Why not try us?"

Apology to Portugal

Among those who showed up was Orlando Sison, who said he was an employee of the Lito Transportation Office conducting activities for the future driver.

"We should write a letter of apology to the people of Portugal for the death of Magellan," Sison said—referring to the 16th-century Portuguese explorer—when asked about his plans.

He also wanted to change the date of Philippine Independence Day and change the Spanish-sounding names of Filipino which have "negative connotations."

"Someone like Magellan in Mexico, I remember of Filipino shouldn't suffer under those names," said Sison, whose name means "lucky" in Spanish.

Billones said, "Maybe you also want to ban Magsal (Lugar) or change those names to Filipino, the Pato (Sison)... or Lungs (Sison)," who said, "or Lungs (Sison)."

White House link

Richard Eduardo Francisco III, 37, went down in his house during the Comelec hearing last to his father.

"I have an online (connection) to the White House. I've e-mailed President Obama to ask that we become a US state, like Hawaii or the 50 territories (Francisco III), Francisco said.

Billones replied, "Did you President Obama if we become a state. We're economy."

Francisco said he wanted to be president to have a better life, adding the Philippines was going nowhere because of greed and corruption.

"I'll have to leave, I would, but as I can push for our US citizenship... Thank you, Your Excellency," he said.

Going back home

Billones corrected him and said Francisco, commission president, to be addressed "Your Excellency" rather than "Your Honor," because "the number of Presidents here might multiply tomorrow."

Francisco said he was not ready to go back home yet but he was willing to go back home after the election. He said he was not ready to go back home yet but he was willing to go back home after the election.

that the effects of exposure to toxic LPG include headaches, back pain or joint pain, dizziness, coughs, diarrhea, dry throat, fatigue and muscle weakness, nausea and breathing difficulty.

Alternative fuels

The passage of the Clean Air Act of 1990 and the National Air Quality Standard (NAQS) in 2000 mandated the use of alternative fuels in the country and use of other alternative fuels in the country.

One of the most widely used alternative fuels in the country, also known as automotive LPG gas, or auto-LPG.

ALP is cleaner than conventional automotive fuels. It is a mixture of light hydrocarbon gas, propane (90 percent) and butane (10 percent), Amato said.

Because of its environmental and economic benefits, auto-LPG was considered one of the best alternative automotive fuels in the country and was introduced in 2000, he added.

Amato said, 11,500 taxis were converted from 2000 to 2009, or an average of 2,300 taxis a year, with 117 refilling stations being built nationwide. Thirty-one auto-LPG conversion shops have been licensed to service vehicles.

Human factor

Amato and researchers with local chapters of ALP vehicles and high consumption of ALP vehicles, the United States, Japan, Australia and Canada.

He added that these results have found that there is no evidence to show that LPG is more dangerous or less dangerous than gasoline or diesel, Amato said.

The studies showed that human factor plays a major role in affecting safety in the use of LPG. In Japan, there is no reported explosion in a similar accident for 30 years since the introduction of various safety measures regarding the use of LPG taxis, Amato said.

Amato also reported human error—such as bad handling and faulty maintenance—as the major cause of accidents involving LPG vehicles. There were 21 accidents reported during refueling, indicating the danger during that stage of operation, he added.

Recommendations

Amato said the DOH study strongly recommended a review and revision of occupational health programs for drivers to prevent the occurrence of occupational health problems due to exposure to ALP.

There should also be strict regulatory control to ensure adequate oxygen (O₂) level, ventilation and adequate maintenance in the vehicle, which can be done during the refueling process at the Local Transportation, Refueling and Regulator (LTPR), he added.

Maintenance of the vehicle should also be considered during the time to allow fresh air to enter the vehicle and ensure adequate oxygen levels in the premises, he said.

Other recommendations included more observation of the maintenance schedule for both ALP and other occupational vehicles prior to registration, introduction of vehicle safety school for drivers, and evaluation of ergonomic and other chemical hazards for transport workers, Amato said.

Ayala water unit expands footprint in Asia

By Rex T. Obachero

MANILA Water Company Inc., a unit of the Ayala group, will further expand its presence in Asia, starting with its acquisition of a majority stake in Jakarta's water supply concessionaire.

Manila Water to acquire control of Indonesian utility

In a deal to the Philippine Stock Exchange, Manila Water said it had signed a share purchase agreement with Indonesia's First Development to acquire the latter's 51 percent stake in PT Pilih Sewerage (Pilih).

Manila Water said it would acquire a 40.35 percent stake in Pilih, which has a total water supply of more than 700,000 liters per day, and 5,000 kilometers of sewer network.

Philex plugs leaking Pdcad mine tunnel

By Dennis L. Lina

PHILEX Mining Corp. yesterday said that it completed the emergency plugging of the tunnel of its Pdcad Mine, in Benguet, which had leaked toxic water and methane gas for nearly three weeks.

According to an official of the company's Benguet Mining Division, the company will now focus on the design and construction of a gallery that is part of the rehabilitation of its leaking mine.

"We have been successfully plugged our leaking tunnel," stated Lina, and we are now focusing our resources on the sealing of a gallery to replace the leaking tunnel for the rehabilitation of the mine.

The leak, the first of its kind, occurred after the company had begun the sealing of a gallery to replace the leaking tunnel for the rehabilitation of the mine.

Philex is continuing the process of sealing the leaking tunnel for the rehabilitation of the mine.

According to Lina, Philex personnel completed the plugging of the leaking tunnel for the rehabilitation of the mine.

IBM expands in PH, puts up BPO facility

Center to serve North American clients

By Paolo P. Roncillo

IBM just gave PH its biggest greenfield project yet with the establishment of a new business process outsourcing (BPO) facility to handle support for the company's "cloud business" software sales in North America.

In a statement, IBM Philippines said the new social business support center would strengthen the company's position as one of the premier players in the local BPO industry.

The company said its "significant investment" in establishing a software customer support center in the Philippines before the end of 2012 would "support the rapidly increasing demand for world business solutions globally."

IBM will open a social business customer support center at the U.P. Ayala Techno-Hub in Quezon City to serve IBM's North America clients.

"This shift of resources to business networking, also known as 'social business,' has become the next big challenge for organizations that are looking to quickly adopt these skills into their business to better reach clients and suppliers, while gaining greater insight on the data being created in these networks," the company said.

Companies that are able to deal with the social media landscape will be able to create more visibility to customer needs and out-innovate competitors, IBM said.

This major investment in the Philippines by IBM Software, a division of IBM, will be operational in January 2013 and will support the rapid global adoption of social business tools.

The Philippines center will be supporting IBM's social business software sales in Government Enterprise social networking software, Enterprise business management software, Customer Experience Suite, Developer for mobile social, among others.

The Philippines joins a roster of IBM social business customer support centers in North America, Dublin, Japan, China, India and Brazil.

IBM has a global network of more than 75 service "Delivery Centers" in several countries around the world including the Philippines.

Last year, BPOs brought in $11 billion in revenue, making the industry the second largest source of foreign exchange for the Philippines, and its contribution from new high-value exports (HVEs).

S&P doubts credit rating upgrade for PH by '13

Credit rating firm sees challenges as well as progress

By Rosend M. Duran

STANDARD & POOR'S Ratings Services said it usually takes two and a half years for a sovereign credit rating to move one notch or two, but the Philippines may get an upgrade as soon as 2013.

But in a list of frequently asked questions sent out on Wednesday, S&P said the upgrade could come sooner or later and that underlying factors could result in regression and even reversal.

Market watchers are generally divided on an apparent race between the Philippines and Indonesia—both rated B+—to win the coveted rating, which starts at BBB.

"There can be large divergences from the average of 2.5 years," S&P said. "For example, it took two years for Azerbaijan, Brazil, Mexico, and Thailand to reach investment grade, compared with 19 months for Brazil and 1.1 months for Thailand."

It was pointed out that the rating on the Philippines was unchanged for quite a while until two recent raises within a relatively short time.

S&P explained that improvements in the Philippines' political environment and policy-making prompted such actions.

"Specifically, the government improved its fiscal deficit, increased its reliance on foreign savings, and reinvigorated the public sector," the agency said.

However, other factors that may influence further actions on the Philippines credit environment are being watched.

One is the inflow of remittances to the Philippines, which may be a negative factor as that it shows the economy's failure to attract foreign capital.

"The second is the weakness in our approach to the country's economy," S&P said.

"This said, the Philippine economic labor force is well diversified in terms of geography and skills sets," it added. "As a country with an underdeveloped social safety net, their relatives support domestic consumption (and) in a better extent, they help in recovery to small enterprises and to residential construction."

In terms of political and policy environment, S&P said the Philippines had relatively stabilized since the 2010 elections, with the legislative more efficient and the judicial system recovering the deficit and spending more on infrastructure.

"In addition, the assessment of the country's political settings takes into account institutional quality and stability, the regulatory and business environment, and the transparency and reliability, which would only pose longer periods of time," the agency said.

S&P cited the Philippines' weak fiscal profile and the high interest burden on its public debt due to a narrow domestic base and the large portion of expensive commercial debt—as among factors that hamper further improvement of its credit rating.

Also, S&P observed that the Philippines had made little headway in improving fiscal planning.

"Its relatively high population growth rate (averaging about 2 percent per year), also detracts from achieving higher per capita wealth levels," the agency said.

As the Philippines' more timely data on nonperforming holdings of local currency debt would be helpful, it added.

5 Must-Do's on Your Next Holiday Getaway

The upcoming holidays give you another chance to get away. Since December is already fast approaching, it's about time to book a plane ticket, go somewhere far from the city's congested roads and tightly packed atmosphere, and experience the heavenly comforts offered by our country's finest beach destinations. But most people spend this precious, limited time away in the comfort of their hotel rooms, watching the news staff they watch at home, or waiting room service. So, here are five must-do's to make the most out of your next holiday getaway.

Know your destination.

Plan your trip in advance. Spontaneity can be fun, but nothing ruins a vacation more than being unprepared. You know the drill: travel light and pack your stuff at least a day before your trip so you don't scramble everything you own late your bag the last minute. While you're at it, research on your destination—the right to see what dishes the place is known for, recommended restaurants by people who have been there, etc. Better to travel light or to be prepared to travel things of importance or you have what to expect. In choosing a destination for your trip, it's always fun to visit your favorite locations, but being adventurous with your choices won't hurt. This time, why not plan a trip to some beach resort? Explore new places, and you'll surely experience and have something new. It also helps to consult everyone you're traveling with. From here, prepare a detailed itinerary based on your research and what everyone wants. You'll be surprised at how convenient your trip will turn out.

Make the most out of your getaway by getting away.

As much as possible, disconnect yourself from your gadget from the day, then work, time all the stress. Give your mind the rest it has been dying to get. Turn on your email's vacation responder or advise your contacts from work beforehand that you are going to be away and that you promise to attend to them as soon as you leave to come. As much as possible, keep away from your mobile phone and computer. The only thing you should be checking throughout your trip should be your camera.

Embrace the sun!

One of the best activities from the beach is that perfect sunbath. This is one of the few times you should consider neglecting your friend. Embrace a holiday vacation head-on by sun and strong winds to enjoy. So on the sand, and let Mr. Sun embrace your skin. Of course, don't forget to apply sunscreen before basking in the sun.

Relax and laze.

What most tourists never consider when on a vacation is resting a lot. You don't have to give up your contact drink to a complete stranger, but it might pay off to start a conversation with the lady selling accessories made of seashells or the old man convincing you that his fish is delicious. They would recommend the beach or which malls sell some affordable souvenirs. Enjoy your life in the sun in the area, and then come back home to the highlights of your trip.

Watch the sunset.

There is probably nothing more inspiring than watching the sun as it comes to its last, magnificent glory. To make up to dinner, sit by the shore (at the very best view) and witness one of nature's most beautiful, free-of-charge moments.

For that perfect holiday getaway for you and your loved ones, BDO Platinum MasterCard and BDO Titanium MasterCard offer great packages at the finest resorts in some of the country's top beach destinations—Boracay, Palawan, Bohol, Cebu, Aklan and Cagayan de Oro.

BOI investments hit P200B, halfway to 2012 goal

EDC signs agreement to explore in Chile, Peru

By Amy R. Pines

ENERGY Development Corp., the country's largest producer of professional energy, has signed an agreement with Spanish-based Altira Power Corp. to conduct exploration work in the latter's potential coal investments in Chile and Peru.

In a disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange yesterday, EDC said that the agreement would allow the latter offices in Manila to conduct due diligence in Altira's professional resources in Chile and Peru.

The agreement also gives EDC the "exclusive right to conduct exploration and due diligence and have the sole right to acquire the projects to invest in the region."

"At this point, EDC will take a 70-percent interest in the joint venture by funding such investment towards setup-up. Altira's joint development cost," the company added.

In a separate text message to investors, EDC president and CEO Richard E. Tabor added that the company's involvement in the agreement with Altira had no impact on its operations.

"Under the charter on exploration, EDC will first conduct due diligence and if we are satisfied, we will invest capital in Chile and plan to drill over to two wells and in Peru we will do reconnaissance surveys, geophysics, geology and geotechnical work," Tabor explained.

EDC is currently racing against other foreign companies to build the first professional power plant in Chile and is aggressively pursuing efforts to locate its operations globally.

Tabor noted that due to the ongoing coal fires preparing in Indonesia particularly survey work in its three professional investment countries in Chile, namely Altira, Enx Global and Boreas, in the hope of getting up the first professional facility there.

The company also plans to pursue other professional professional resources in Chile, even after it dropped the Colombia and Japan projects as joint ventures closed that these projects were not commercially viable.

EDC, which is scheduled as a public trade in the stock exchange, is engaged in the exploration, development and operation of professional facilities, as well as the operation and maintenance of the professional power plants in the Philippines with an installed capacity of 1,130 megawatts.

Gov't doubles efforts to meet target for the year of P400B

By Rex T. Ochoa

THE BOARD of Investments (BOI) has ordered some P200 billion worth of investment to date, according to Trade Undersecretary Gerardo L. Padilla.

This is equivalent to just half of the year's target of P400 billion for the end of the year, which was set by the government to encourage investment in the country.

"We are continuing to work hard to increase this," Padilla said in a briefing yesterday, noting that there was still time for new investments to come in.

The BOI wants to generate about P400 billion worth of investments this year, having passed P300 billion in 2011.

In the coming year, the BOI will include the lack of existing investment in the country to boost investment.

Industry stakeholders, through the Chamber of Mines of the Philippines, are also working on initiatives on the implementation of investment policy reforms that have to do with investment incentives.

To achieve the investment targets, the government is supporting investment incentives, incentives, and related activities.

The latest investment incentive is a 10-percent deduction from taxes that will come in force for the year of P400 billion. The BOI will also have a 10-percent deduction from taxes that will come in force for the year of P400 billion.

"We're focused on helping a 10-percent deduction from taxes that will come in force for the year of P400 billion," Padilla said.

The BOI is also conducting a study on the 100 investment incentives that will be implemented in the country to boost investment.

"We just kept reinventing ourselves, time and again"

Benegros has turned 111 and will keep growing

Philippines, September 2012. This year marks the 111th anniversary of Benegros, one of the world's leading companies in the pharmaceutical industry. From its humble beginnings in 1901 in Bulacang in the Manila District, it has blossomed into a world-renowned brand, and is now a company whose products are used daily by more than 110 million people across the globe. "To share this exciting milestone, it should not be taken for granted that a company will be able to grow and develop as successfully over such a long period of time," stressed Hospital General Manager of the Benegros Hospital of Benegros, Dr. "This would only be achieved through Benegros's persistent, six-decade-long vision of being there, together with the company's ability to reinvent itself whenever it was necessary." A major goal is the creative spirit and passion of the Benegros, which the allied services have been pursuing and passed on - and it is a legacy that is continued and enriched until this very day.

Security meet set

PHILIPPINE security agencies will hold a joint meeting to discuss the latest trends and practices in the security industry. The meeting is expected to be held in Manila on October 18.

The event is organized by the Philippine Security Council (PSC) and will feature a panel discussion on the latest trends in security, including cyber security, terrorism, and emergency response.

Dr. Gons, president of the PSC, said that the meeting is a key initiative of the PSC to enhance the security of the Philippines, and that it is a legacy that is continued and enriched until this very day.

LTO and MMDA officials speak up for Road Safety at 1st Usapan AAP

IN THE morning of Sept. 28, the Automobile Association Philippines (AAP) launched Usapan AAP a series of monthly roundtable talks with the media and government and private sector individuals actively involved in promoting road safety. Hosted by AAP in the lobby of its 28 EDSA Greenhills office, the first Usapan AAP had as guests of Honor Land Transportation Office (LTO) Assistant Secretary Virginia R. Torres and Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Assistant General Manager Emerson Carlos representing MMDA Chair Francis Tolentino, who was suddenly called by President Aquino to attend the opening of a new wing in Quezon City. Usapan AAP was emceed by Philippine Star columnist Chie Beltran.

Usapan AAP was conceived as an informal, congenial gathering where the media could meet, talk and have lunch with government officials and influential private sector personalities who share AAP's goal to make moving and commuting safe for all road users. As AAP president Gus Legnusa said in his welcome remarks, "The future we are having now will be a continuing activity for AAP. In everybody's house, everything we do here in AAP is for the benefit of motorists. So anything that promotes movement, not a like to be involved in it. In fact, we'd like to make moving a pleasure, which includes, of course, road safety or another old advocacy."

The media guests' additional guests to Torres and Carlos about the li-ensing and regulation of driver's vehicles, the last on modifying exhaust pipes, the Carabanda case, the ban for the installation of a driver's license, whether the LTO properly inspects motor vehicles before their registration, the validity and proper use of commercial plates, what the Ranking of headlights mean in the Philippines.

Level up and be counted

By Hans Estrella/Inquirer

Student correspondent, St. Joseph University College

PREMOSS, 17, HAS never voted in her life, except perhaps to elect the class president through a show of hands. She had lived through four panderos—Ramos, Estrada, Arroyo and Aquino—municipal elections and congresses, and thousands of public officials meeting the wheel of her country. She has elected none of them.

She is one of the almost 12 million Filipino youth expected to cast their votes in the upcoming elections next year. Like many of her peers, Premoss finds herself confused by the more than 10 Philippine voting regulations. She isn't even sure if she can register for voting in the upcoming election. She will turn 18 in March, two months before the elections in May.

Premoss has to find out soon if she can vote next year, as the deadline for registration looms, Oct. 30. Premoss's two brothers, shared by 12 million of her peers, has not gone unnoted. A number of nongovernmental organizations are helping people like her navigate through registration.

Youth Vote Philippines has partnered with the National Youth Commission (NYC) and the Commission on Elections (Comelec) to help promote voter's registration among the Filipino youth.

"We are now working very closely with the NYC and Comelec to make sure all voters are aligned. This is for 2013 and 2016," stated Ching Araya, lead organizer of Youth Vote Philippines.

Premoss is planning to run for the next election, according to Ching. "She has the

Level up and be counted

By George M.

to show proof that she will turn 18 before May?"

In an estimated number of 12 million, first-time voters like Pinoy could prove to be a game-changer in the upcoming midterm elections. Twenty-five-year-old Karl Samadiong, who motivates the youth for their hopes, encourages the youth to vote because it is "not responsibility."

"No excuses," said Karl, who also served as president of the Ateneo de Manila University Student Council back in 2007.

Not as high
He had been going around the country, and liberally covered that enthusiasm in his high school in 2009, when he personally found himself motivating the youth for Senate Ballotage and other social campaigns.

"That's because it's a matured citizen," shared Karl. "But those who I have met expect more specific policies and programs from the leaders they mean to vote for."

For fourth-year Philippine, which advances for June-based 2013 elections, this is good news. Chief Jorge advises the Filipino youth to vote for leaders who can follow up on their promises.

"The Filipino youth should vote for leaders who have an open invitation for the country; who can give the nation's interest above their own; who can go beyond promises to actual plans and programs that can benefit the people."

For his part, Karl deposed this advice to voters in the 2011 election: "Vote for those who can deliver specific solutions to our problems and those with enough track record to prove they can follow through with their specific promises."

There are, of course, inspiring politicians who offer free transportation for first-time voters to register. With a number as small as 12 million, it comes as no surprise that, the voters, politicians are eager to introduce themselves to first-time voters in the hope of securing their vote come 2013 elections. Chief Jorge does not see this practice as entirely ringing true, amidst the reality of voters for disapproval.

"It makes both ways...I believe voters are a little more mature. The politicians seem to be aware of the voters, but at the same time we have our own bar of registered youth," explained Jorge.

"Part of the responsibility of every citizen, youth included, is to make the right decision when choosing our leaders."

Karl expressed his faith in the Filipino youth, many of whom agreed not to support the candidate of their bet. Despite it, he said:

"I have met young Filipinos who nonchalantly do things to build their communities or the lives of people outside their community. They young people are not waiting for General Elections, pushing their own social improvement, pursuing with leaders and leaders, or teaching positions, and there are just some concrete examples of their contributions to nation building."

The challenges there is to be more than just the voter for their personal interest.

"Anyone equipped with communication skills in the power to tell a story also carries that responsibility to the nation of those who came."

During her own term in college this year, Pinoy will still have to be more proactive. She will spend her time catching up with friends and relatives. Hopefully one day while conversations, she will find herself at the municipal office of the Council, eager to register for the first time.

Krizza little thing called love

Talent search winner talks about gay marriage, Twitter haters and Aiza Seguerra

By Rapunzel Dela Cruz Jr.

SEATTLE THINGS have changed since Krizza Met won the Q107.7 talent search "ThruUp" last year.

The young dancer's voice has become deeper, said Gino de Jesus, the show's musical live producer for Entertainment TV.

At the start of the second season of "ThruUp," which considers an audience's favorite, instead of chosen, the show's musical live producer for Entertainment TV.

The struggles to find the competition and the rigorous threat for way more joining for his full-time have made for tougher, Krizza told the reporter.

Backers

In the most controversy on his, Krizza was chosen for the backup of his mentor Alex Segura and Alex's girlfriend Chela for one of the few openly gay relationships in the local music scene. Krizza and the open singer's relationship is the first in the local music scene to be openly gay.

Chela says that "We haven't talked for a while, but should I mention, I'd certainly say, he's helped me during the competition."

In the first, Krizza and Alex had not discussed the situation, even as they worked closely on her with the other duo. They found on the scene, Krizza said. "You're my producer, people could go ahead and talk, things aren't going well for Alex."

Super collaborator
Alex was "super supportive," Krizza said. "For the other, we accepted the challenge, even as they worked closely on her with the other duo. They found on the scene, Krizza said. "You're my producer, people could go ahead and talk, things aren't going well for Alex."

MTRCB no longer screen films for FDCP cinematheques

By Reynold San Diego Jr.

TWO GOVERNMENT bodies asked to screen the film library have signed a landmark agreement that could open the genre to local cinema.

The Film Development Council of the Philippines (FDCP), represented by chair Ricardo Banaag, recently signed Memorandum Circular No. 07-2012 with the Movie and Television

Review and Classification Board (MTRCB), represented by vice-chair and officer-in-charge Emmanuel B. Banaag.

Uncover NEW SKIN in your 30s

Now that you're in your thirties, you're at the top of your game. You're making money, buying your first designer bag, and possibly a little part of "The Bachelor" or "The Contender." You're taking well-deserved vacations in and out of the country. This could be the best years of your life. Don't you think your skin deserves to look its best too?

Unless you took great care of your skin, there's a chance you're showing signs of aging, not to mention, uneven skin tone, fine lines on your eye area, forehead and around your mouth. (Quick test: look in the mirror and mirror your face to check if you have them.)

It's time you make some good skin investments. You've tried and tested a variety of skin creams by now, so you know what you want and what you don't. Now you're set on only top-notch skincare technology, treatments and techniques. Finally, services that target wrinkles, blemishes, and uneven skin tone.

At Facial Care Centre, you get everything from all of the above.

Guaranteed safe procedures from skin care specialists under the supervision of doctors ensure the safety of the treatments. Here are some of their recommended treatments especially for younger-looking skin.

DIAMOND PEEL. It's the official "sleeping girl's" night mask that causes a dull complexion. Make up slugs, pores, and adds to blemishes of dead skin cells. Remove buildup new skin with this gentle exfoliating procedure. Regular treatments also improve pores and help control oil production.

ADVANCED LASERTONE. Notice those fine lines on the sides of your eyes and around your mouth when you smile? Forget Botox. This non-invasive light treatment thins out signs of aging without the need for Botox.

SKIN TONE RE-ENERGIZER. Tense facial muscles and fine sagging skin for a firmer look and contours face and neck for added definition—without having to go under the knife.

Drop by Facial Care Centre today and start making your 30s the age of your best skin. Call 892-7546 / 892-7547 (Cebu) / 892-7546 (PAMPANGA) to book your FREE consultation.

French PM visit marks stronger ties between PH and France

By Tere Quinsamola

MANILA History in Philippine-French relations, French Prime Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault will arrive in the Philippines on Friday for a three-day visit aimed at furthering long-standing trade and cultural ties between the two nations.

Ayrault will be in Manila from Dec. 20 to 22, the first time for a French head of state to visit the Philippines since Paul and Marie Laurette's diplomatic relations in 1847, just after the end of World War II.

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said Ayrault will arrive in Manila with a 130-member delegation, including ministers, members of parliament, and business leaders.

"Prime Minister Ayrault's visit does not only represent a milestone event in Philippine-French relations. More importantly, it marks a strong signal that France has taken serious notice of the positive developments in the country and is ready to re-energize its partnership with the Philippines as a friend and dynamic partner," the DFA said in announcing Ayrault's visit.

Renewed Dynamism

Themed "Enhancing Philippine-French relations through political, economic and cultural cooperation," the high-level French delegation's trip to the Philippines "will infuse renewed dynamism in our bilateral ties and propel our partnership to greater heights," said the DFA.

Joining Ayrault in the visit are Nicolas Krieger, France's Minister for Foreign Trade, and Wilfrid Guery-Monnet, French Minister Delegate for French National Affairs, whose office is attached to France's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

President Benigno Aquino III will host Ayrault and his delegation in a welcoming dinner during their visit, a reciprocal honoring for the honor the French bestowed to the President's mother, the late President Corason Aquino, in 1980, the DFA said.

In July of that year, the French government invited the late Aquino as chief guest during France's centennial celebration of the bicentennial of the French Revolution.

"France was one of the first states to recognize the government of Benigno Francisco Aquino at the height of the 1986 People Power Revolution," said the DFA, in reference to the people's revolt that resulted in late Aquino as prime and toppled the dictatorship of Ferdinand Marcos.

Bilateral Relations

Boosting their meetings, Aquino

and Ayrault will "exchange views on pressing bilateral relations, as well as on regional and multilateral issues."

A group of key French business leaders from Ayrault's delegation will also meet with key Philippine counterparts at the Philippine French Business Forum slated on Oct. 20.

"The meeting is expected to boost economic relations between the two nations, which has been one of late with a noted increase in shared French investments."

DFA figures showed that total bilateral trade between the Philippines and France totaled $1.145 billion (roughly $10 billion) last year. Total approved French investments were measurably placed at $1.145 billion, an increase of 50 percent from 2010.

French companies are also looking to participate in both the Philippine consumer market and public-private partnership projects (PPP) with the government, the foreign office said.

Among firms with strong presence in the Philippines include Lafarge cement, Veolia waterworks, the AIA global insurance group, and Alstom, a telecommunications technology firm. The DFA said French companies R&D Day, a public transportation firm, and Thales, an electrical systems provider, are also interested in taking part in PPP projects.

Art Exchange

During his visit, Ayrault will also bring up France's cultural cooperation with the Philippines through the signing of an agreement on the signing of "Philippine-art of Exchange," an exhibition of Philippine art at the upcoming Musée de l'Orangerie in Paris.

The ministers, members of France's premier union for independent art and culture, will display Philippine art from April 9 to July 21, 2013.

"The exhibition will put the Philippines in the cultural map of France and is expected to attract thousands of French, European, and international visitors, as well as generate wide media exposure. The event will be expanded during the exhibition to include workshops on Philippine culture, Philippine cinema, Philippine musical instruments, and others," the DFA said.

France has been among the Philippines' most cultural partners, mainly through UNESCO, a program initiated last year to bring French art and culture to the Philippines.

Under the program, the French Embassy in Manila and the Alliance Française de Manille will host 10 events in the Philippines annually to exhibit French and Philippine individual and collaborative work in the arts, among them music, fashion, visual arts and modern cinema.

Private Projects

Ayrault's last stop is Cebu, where he will witness the opening of the Benigno-Traust project, a public transport program partially funded by the French government's development aid, Agence Française de Développement (AFD).

AFD has been closely working with the Aquino administration to provide private projects in education, health, justice, education, sustainable urban development through public transport, water supply and sanitation, ecological protection and regional building of local government units.

Apart from official ties, the Philippines and France also share common people-to-people exchange, such as the French-Philippine Young and Working in France (YWF) program, which has sent nearly 4,000 French students studying in the Philippines.

Historic ties that bind

Though formal diplomatic relations were established between the Republic of the Philippines and the Republic of France on June 28, 1947, history tells us that the relations between the Philippines and France go beyond 50 years.

XXXX Frenchmen and Filipinos share a common policy in their unique relations and diplomatic history.

That President Corason Aquino, who was called son of the Motherland but a most rare State of the Republic for a phenomenal record to power through the peaceful EDSA revolution in February 1986, was personally named by late French President Francois Mitterrand to attend the Bicentennial Celebration of the Fall of Bastille in 1989. France was one of the first countries to recognize French Prime Minister Ayrault's government.

PH Aquino was also featured in the singular honor of being the only prime minister among the select heads of state and government.

State Honor

For this rare honor, the Philippine flag was flown alongside the French tricolor along the Champ Elysee during the peak of the celebration.

Personally met by President Mitterrand and his wife in the Elysee, Mrs. Aquino was flown by helicopter to the Elysee Palace for a reception by the members of the National Assembly where the accolade to the late Corason, the Third Monarch, began.

According to an account in "The People's Witness," hundreds of French Republic officials on Bastille's eve, Mr. Aquino to the State Government, "a magnificent sight to behold as they gathered around, meeting and mingling."

Later at the Elysee Palace at the very banquet, Mitterrand honored Mr. Aquino with these words: "In the last of a year devoted to the centennial of the French Revolution, this visit to the French Republic is a great honor for the French Republic, as it is the visit of the 14th of July our National Holiday."

I cannot but hope, for this occasion, a line of these people who are working to create a new and more glorious world in the spirit of the national values of human rights and democracy that France prepared to the world in 1789. It is only fitting, Mitterrand said, that with this rare visit with which you honor us, you should be the first to arrive at this gathering of the friends of France."

President Corason Aquino

Long History

Philippine-French relations have a long history. Through formal diplomatic relations were established between the Republic of the Philippines and the Republic of France on June 28, 1947, history tells us that the relations between the Philippines and France go beyond 50 years.

A French consulate was established in Manila in the late 19th century when the Philippine was still a colony of Spain. The then-lived First Philippine Republic has a diplomatic representation in Paris in 1898 when the United States and Spain were negotiating the terms for what has come down as the Treaty of Paris.

According to Secretary Anthony George the Philippine National Archives has a plan that relates the French colonial actions, the act, and the like that, according to the June 12, 1898 document of Philippine independence, commemorates the release of the 45-year-old French rule in the Philippines.

Art Exchange

During his visit, Ayrault will also bring up France's cultural cooperation with the Philippines through the signing of an agreement on the signing of "Philippine-art of Exchange," an exhibition of Philippine art at the upcoming Musée de l'Orangerie in Paris.

The ministers, members of France's premier union for independent art and culture, will display Philippine art from April 9 to July 21, 2013. The exhibition will put the Philippines in the cultural map of France and is expected to attract thousands of French, European, and international visitors, as well as generate wide media exposure. The event will be expanded during the exhibition to include workshops on Philippine culture, Philippine cinema, Philippine musical instruments, and others, the DFA said.

Under the program, the French Embassy in Manila and the Alliance Française de Manille will host 10 events in the Philippines annually to exhibit French and Philippine individual and collaborative work in the arts, among them music, fashion, visual arts and modern cinema.

Eurobrands brings Peugeot to the Philippines

EuroBRANDS Philippines Inc. or EBI, has joined the worldwide network of Peugeot dealers in the country's importer and distributor of the French brand in the Philippines.

Eurobrands is the newest addition to the prestigious business network that comprises the Columbian Group of Companies.

Peugeot joins the holding company's exclusive list that has of two other global brands and company continues to use more powerful high-end technology with precision and efficiency. At the helm of the Columbian Group of Companies is businessman Jose "Ch. Adriano" who is Chairman Eurobus, with businessmen Johnny T. Hernandez, Jr. (Chairman, and Paolo J. Malabanan, Jr. as President of Euro 200 Peugeot's direct brand of luxury, in tandem with its high level of efficiency, provide many of the challenges to the high-powered system to be successfully by the Columbian group to handle the European brand.

The team's wide-ranging experience and expertise that covers the entire range of automotive manufacturing, procurement, marketing, advertising and sales and distribution, will no doubt ensure that Peugeot eventually becomes a top-of-mind brand in the country.

Peugeot's entry to the Philippines highlights the Columbian group's commitment to provide the Philippine market with cars that have only the best fuel savings and environmentally friendly technologies.

In the world's largest producers of diesel engines, Peugeot has perfected diesel technology to the extent that it has preserved and maintained its level of efficiency even as it has continued its harmful efforts.

Peugeot's revolutionary ultra-low technology electric and unique no fan fuel's diesel-powered cars, in a model of fuel efficiency and economy, in coming, edge diesel particulate filter systems, a state-of-the-art Peugeot technology, can it really reach of the low-level CO2 emissions that are the basis of diesel-powered cars.

PSA Peugeot Citroen: A proud European tradition

PSA Peugeot Citroen, the second largest selling automaker brand in Europe, is a major French automaker and the world's leading producer of diesel engines. With a proud tradition that dates back more than 200 years, Peugeot has evolved from a racing shop to worldwide, to the manufacture of sports and other vehicles, and now luxury and related vehicles. Through the years, the Peugeot brand has grown in popularity and success, adapting step by step to the changing world. The Industrial Revolution, the Great Depression of the 1930s, the period of prosperity of the 1950s and the economic crisis that characterized much of the 1970s. In the period that saw the VW Golf Mk1, Peugeot has shown its adaptability by becoming a leader in the manufacture of compact and mid-range cars. In the 1980s, Peugeot's focus shifted to luxury and related vehicles. In the 1990s, Peugeot's focus shifted to luxury and related vehicles. In the 2000s, Peugeot's focus shifted to luxury and related vehicles. In the 2010s, Peugeot's focus shifted to luxury and related vehicles.

rapid manufacturing, a dedication to work that has increased. Peugeot worked with Renault from 1966 and with Volvo Cars from 1972 to 1974. Peugeot bought a 30% share of Citroen, which it over completely in 1976. The partnership was a success for the PSA group, keeping the separate identities of both brands but sharing part of engineering and technical resources. In 1991, the brand of the Peugeot and Citroen merged, which is the perfect condition for the group to work together. Many other successful vehicles followed. Peugeot has introduced new technology that revolutionized manufacturing throughout the world. In cutting-edge research in diesel technology, Peugeot has introduced the HDi engine or high-pressure Diesel Injection system which produces much of the diesel engine's traditional diesel emissions, reducing noise and turbulence, while maintaining much of its advantages. The high price for the HDi has been the introduction in a "switch fleet" of the production HDi (PSA), which completely eliminates particulates, of whatever size, in the manufacturing process and thus contributing to a cleaner environment. A switch-to diesel HDi's Hybrid technology further that achieve more with higher fuel economy and lower harmful emissions. PSA has consistently been the European most profitable automaker. In 2007, the global market share of PSA grew to 5.3%. In Europe, PSA is the second largest player with a market share of 11.9% with 3.5 million vehicles sold in 2011. In the same year, 42% of vehicle sales of PSA were from outside Europe. In the coming years, with the group's aggressive expansion plans in both North America, Asia and Russia, PSA is expanding vehicle sales outside of Europe.

IN THE KNOW: A glimpse of French governance

My friend Mr. Hagan

WORKING TOGETHER—The cabinet is headed by two officials—the Prime Minister in Tamil and the President in Hindi.

While the Prime Minister is appointed by the President, a two-thirds vote of the national议会. The Prime Minister directs government operations: controls the civil service, government agencies and central banks, and oversees the implementation of laws.

The Prime Minister is nominated by majority of the National Assembly—also known as the Lower House of the Parliament. The Prime Minister is elected from the members of the National Assembly.

The French President is elected by the people to a five-year term. Unlike his European counterparts, unlike him, having the power to appoint and dismiss the Prime Minister, the French President wields great power, especially in matters of foreign policy: the commander in chief, the nuclear deterrent and the national special forces in military operations.

Like the Philippines, the French government has chosen to maintain strict restrictions against foreign investment.
